Alex (A)

I live in a big town with my wife and three children. We live in a flat so we don't have a garden. I work as a manager in a clothes shop. I catch the bus to work. My wife is a teacher and she walks to the school. At the weekend we sometimes go to the countryside. My family and I like going for long walks. On Saturday night I usually cook. Italian food is our favourite so I cook pizza or pasta.

Ben (B)

I was born in the town but I moved to the countryside last year. I live with my wife and son. We have a big garden. I work in an office and I cycle to work. My wife works in a hospital and she drives to work. On Saturdays, we usually take the bus into town to do some shopping. Sometimes we meet up with friends and go to a café for lunch. My wife and son enjoy cooking. We love Indian food.

Cone Snails

Cone snails live under the sea all around the world. Some live in the Atlantic, but most of them are in the Indian and Pacific Oceans. Cone snails all have a shell. The shells have lots of bright colours. They are thin at one end, but fatter at the other, like an ice cream cone. You cannot eat the snail inside, but people will pay £100 for a big shell because they are beautiful.

Some Cone snails are small but the biggest can grow to 20 centimetres long. These are Leopard Cones, which are white with brown spots. The smallest are Pygmy Cones, which are 0.25 centimetres long. Glory Cones are medium-sized and have beautiful yellow and orange shells. There are over 800 kinds of Cone snails.

Cone snails are pretty, but if you pick one up, it can sting you, like a scorpion. If a small Cone snail stings you, it will hurt like a bee sting. A big Cone snail is very dangerous and hurts as much as a jellyfish sting. Thirty people have died from these stings. If you see a Cone snail on the beach or in the sea, it is better to look, but not touch.

For questions 1-3, please answer in complete sentences. (2 marks each)

1. Where in the world do most Cone snails live?

2. Why do people want to buy Cone shells?
